

Ultrasound scans are diagnostic tests ordered to assess fetal clinical health to guide the care you and your baby receive. Ultrasound findings can only be communicated to you by your clinician (midwife or radiologist). Support staff are NOT authorized to share clinical findings. Routine results will ONLY be communicated to you at your next regularly scheduled appointment. Any clinically significant results requiring follow-up will be communicated to you as soon as we are aware of them. Whether visible or not, we will NOT share fetal sex with you outside of your routine appointments, as it is NOT a clinical finding. The Society of Obstetricians and Gynecologists of Canada states “the fetus should not be exposed to ultrasound for commercial and entertainment purposes.” Health Canada cautions that “ultrasound for the sole purpose of making videos of babies.... provides no information about the baby’s health.” Despite these cautions, if you choose not to wait until your next regularly scheduled appointment to find out the sex of your baby, you may choose to arrange a 3D ultrasound which you can pay for privately.

Preparation for Ultrasound:

Obstetric/Pelvic – Drink 4 large glasses (1 Litre) of water one hour prior to your ultrasound appointment. Do not go to the washroom as your bladder MUST be full for the ultrasound.
